

I May Forget

I may forget to turn the light off
I may forget to put the toilet seat down
I may forget not to wear jeans to your office parties
But I never forget your smile

I may forget to take my vitamins
I may forget not to swig out of the carton
I may forget that you hate clutter
But I never forget the feelings I have when I'm with you

I may forget to record your favorite TV show
I may forget that you hate it when I'm indecisive
I may forget to pay the rent on time
But I never forget the joy I see in your eyes

I may forget to walk the dog
I may forget not to turn the alarm off before you've gotten up
I may forget your favorite color
But I never forget the way you touch me

I may forget not to mess up the morning paper
I may forget that you hate my favorite—and I mean favorite—shirt
I may forget not to squeeze the toothpaste from the center
But I never forget how it feels to have someone to talk to

I may forget what we ate on our first date
I may forget to take the trash out
I may forget not to leave my dirty clothes on the floor
But I never forget to not fall asleep unless you're beside me

I may forget to take the clothes out of the drier
I may forget to fill the car up with gas
I may forget our favorite song
But I never forget to ask how your day was

I may forget the password for my email
I may forget not to take the last bagel
I may forget your birthday
Yes, I may forget all the simple things
But I never forget that I'm in love with you
